Music Loving People Of Lancaster. Ridpath's Chautauqua Course

To Be Here This Summer.

It will indeed be a source of great pleasure to the people of Lancaster and Garrard county to know that we are to have a Chautauqua Course in Lancaster during the coming summar. The dates have not been finally fixed, but it $ will probably be during the last week in June or the first week in July. Twenty progressive business men and citizens of Lancaster have made this possible by each guaranteeing to the $ | Chautauqua company the sum of twenty dollars each, and they will depend upon the sale of tickets to save them from $ loss because of their progressiveness n making it possible to have this splen did attraction. The tickets will be placed on sale in the near future and everyone who purchases or binde them selves to purchase, may rest assured that it will be money well spent. Many of our people go a great distance each year in order to attend these Chautauqua gatherings, and many of them have seen the one which is to appear here, which is Ridpath's, and is given up to be the best on the road. The course will be a five day one, two attractions each day, afternoon and evening, and one can illy afford to miss a single one of the attractions, for all are of the very highest class obtainable.

We give below a list of attractions, which is subject to revision and addition, but you may rest assured that no revising will detract from the splendid

We take this method of thanking you for your kindness in responding to our call of January 1st.

Permit us to now return the favor in the following way.

Having our accounts paid up to date, we are better able to meet our bills and consequently better able to buy better goods and buy in larger quautities.

We have found that the best goods are always the cheapest to our trade and the kind that acts as salesman for our house.

When we are able to buy in such quantities we, of course, buy in such a way as to compel! the jobber to pay the difference between cheaper goods and the best, and in this way we can assure you that for the new year we can quote you in accordance with the above.

Quality bought in quantity finds no competition in a cheaper grade. Let us show you.

Again thanking you for your patronage for the past and trusting that we can serve you throughout the year, we are, very truly yours,

"We shall shoot out the glasses." I said to Nikolai. "Perchance, if we shoot out the central lense, no light visible from a distance will issue. The Potemkin will sail to her destruction."

Nikolai smiled rather sadly.

"We cannot approach that coast within two thousand yards," he answered. "And, at that distance, no rifle bullet would penetrate those thick lenses. Moreover, at such a distance, who could hit a beam of light by night -or even the lighthouse, by day, clothed, as it always is, with perpetual

"What then?" I asked. "We must take it by storm," he answered. "It is guarded by three soldiers-veterans of the Imperial Guard. Russia leaves little to chance. It must be captured."

That night the lighthouse was to be rushed. There was no other way. At dark we took our way in toward the shore cautiously by means of the lead: we anchored at a distance of a mile and a little more, and leaving our adversaries had command of the two men aboard, the five of us remaining rowed cautiously through the

More than once our little boat upset, leaving us clinging to the sharp, needle-pointed crags. But each time we recovered ourselves, by some fortuitous miracle. At length, dripping, frozen and utterly exhausted, we reached the rocks on which the great lighthouse stood. It towered above us, a veritable colossus of masonry; and from its summit the steady beams of light poured forth on three sides through the fogs. And now I perceived why my suggestion could not have been carried out. The lenses were set back into the masonry, so that no rifle bullet could have been aimed at them from the base of the cliffs. Only far out at sea would they become ac cessible, and there, as Nikolai had said, they could not have been his hand to his forehead. "How long have you been confined here, Adam Gortchakoff?" he asked with a quavering voice.

I saw Nikolai start back and clap

"Twelve years," the old man anwered. "And my daughter also." "God help you," muttered Nikolai. Tears welled into his eyes. "Russia has not forgotten you," he said, raising the old man's hand to his lips. "Nor you, madame. But we thought you had died in Archangel."

"There were twelve prisoners here when I arrived," said the woman in French. "My father and I have alone survived." She turned upon Nikolai fiercely. "Does Nicholas Stambuloff still work for Russia?" she asked. "He is still our hope and Russia's hope," said Nikolai. Then, hastily, he began telling them of the desperate chance that had let us hither. "Can you endure your chains for a few hours longer?" he asked "We have endured them twelve years," answered the woman; and she bent over her father and pressed a

They had abandoned the attempt, knowing of the death of two of our men, and had resolved to make by boat for the open sea.

> But they had known nothing of our yacht. The men whom we had left there, seeing the soldiers advancing in their boat through the fog, had believed them to be us: they themselves were not seen by the soldiers, who, in rowing, naturally had their backs toward the open sea. Thus the two parties ran into each other's arms. Cut off from the open sea, the soldiers had nowhere to escape; on the other hand, the men in the yacht, anxious to learn our fate, opened a parley with them, being all Russians and from the same territory. In the end it was recognized that a truce must be effected until the fortune of war should decide for one side or the other. This was satisfactory to the soldiers, but more so to us, who knew of the approach of the Potemkin.

"Fools that we were," said Nikolai to me. "Had we known what we know now we should have let the Potemkin land her new captives here, when she had departed, we should away. Now all is lost. The vessel will pound to pieces on the rocks and the signal was repeated. It was the Potemkin.

We put our three friendly enemies down in the vaults, first exchanging clothes with them. They went readily enough, when we had explained to them that their imprisonment was only temporary, until after the vessel's departure. Then three of us, dressed in the Russian uniform, with the two other men in the rear of us, waited for the arrival of the boat. It seemed an endless interval-it was really about an hour before the ship's boat grated against the rocks. She carried the six prisoners, chained, with six armed guards. Nikolai welcomed the sailors in their native tongue. They advanced, entirely unsuspecting. Then, in a trice, we had sprung on them and disarmed them. So sudden was our attack that they attempted no resistance; they stood staring at us, foolishly grinning. The prisoners were no whit less astonished.

> "On guard!" cried our companion. We heard steps on the rocks; we drew our revolvers and waited. But. what was our astonishment when through the mists, we saw our two companions of the yacht and the three Russian soldiers conversing amicably together as they approached us. A short interrogation convinced Nikolai that the truce was a genuine one. We hurried down and, by the aid of a file which the soldiers gave us, had soon freed the prisoners from their bonds. Then, seated together over a meal, explanations were offered and

It appeared that the light-house was used as a secret penal station to which prisoners were sent who had been sentenced to the mines of Archangel. The secret had been well kept, and this explained why none of those sent to the frozen north had ever been heard from. They were not there: the cruisers put them invariably upon this desolate rock, where they remained in chains until death claimed vessel in safely." "How?" asked Nikolai. I took him up into the light chamber. As I had said, one of the three great lenses had remained uninjured. Then I explained my plan. As Nikolai took it in he became greatly excited. He clapped me upon the shoulder and strode up and down the room, vowing that the bride should yet be restored to her husband, from whose arms she had been snatched a short week after the wedding, twelve years before.

This was the scheme. The single lens, set into the central frame, would convey the light straight out to sea and afford a signal for the cruiser. The Potemkin would anchor in the offing, place the prisoners in a boat under a guard, and row them ashore. We should admit them, capture and disarm the guard, and hold them in the vaults. The next party that came would meet a similar fate; and so all who arrived, for even if they suscted any danger, we could defend the light-house against a regiment, while the thick fog would render a bombardment impossible. What would probably occur, however, would be that the ship's officers, after the second party failed to return, would believe that both boats had been swamped in the breakers, and would take the ship back to Russia without further investigation. We raised the great lens into the central frame. We refilled the oil lamp; and once more, though on either of two sides was darkness, through the central aperture a great

We placed our new captives with the soldiers below and waited for "One lens is still unbroken. It was the second boat. But no boat came. With the callousness of the Russian officer, the commander cared nothing for the fate of the crew. If they had perished on that dangerous coast, at least their captives, chained as they were, had died with them. That was all he cared about. At four o'clock we heard four guns fired in swift succession. It was the sign of depar-

> Excusing himself, Nikolai rushed up the stairs. I would have followed him, but he signed to me to wait below. When he returned I could gather no information as to the reason of his departure.

> We brought our captives, now nine in number, up from the vaults. The situation had already been explained to the sailors by the three soldiers. We offered them a safe passage to England, our destination, whence they could readily ship aboard some boat for the Baltic. As there was no alternative, our terms were eagerly accepted, and once more our enemies vere converted into friends. I congratulated ourselves upon the termination of our adventure—bloodless, save for the death of our two men the night preceding.

> But when at last Nicholas Stambuloff understood the situation he turned upon Nikolai like a madman. At first his anger was incomprehensible to all of us. Nikolai, soothing him as a child, told him that presently

This brings up the question as to whether or not bulls of dairy breeding are more inclined to viciousness than are those of beef breeding.

> It is our judgment that males of dairy breeding are much more so inclined than males of beef breeding It must be remembered that the dairy bred male is of nervous temperament. Beef bred males are of what is known in humans as the lymphatic temperament, being symbolical of sluggishness. This difference in temperament does not necessarily imply that all dairy bred males are vicious and unsafe.

It is said of the pure bred Guernsey sire that he is able to stamp his breed characteristics on other cattle. The Guernsey is a producer of milk of high quality and of a rich yellow color. In many respects they resemble the Jersey, being noted for the high per cent of butter fat in milk produced. As a butter making cow there are few that surpass the Guernsey. Pilot of the Glen, whose photo is here re-produced, was champion bull of his breed at the Illinois state fair.

However, it does account for a much larger percentage of them being so than in the case of males of beet breeds. However, the male of dairy breeds should be carefully handled to avoid the development of viciousness. The herdsman should make a friend taught to know that the herdsman is his friend. He should be more frequently handled with a friendly stroke than with the pitchfork. The herds-

The Womans Club (Edited By The Womans Club)

The little month of February stands unique in the calendar of the American year because it contains the birthdays human life by attacks of dairy brea of our two greatest men. Though dead, these men yet speak, and their words are for the healing of the nation. The life of a great and good man is one of the most eflective of all instruments for the molding of the character of succeeding generations.

We live at our best only when we live in constant touch with the great. The Roman Emperor Alexander Severus had in his oratory no images of gods, but only statues of great men, such as Alexander, Orpheus, Appollonius, Abraham, and Jesus, An illustrious Frenchman of the nineteenth century, into whose soul something of the spirit of the old Roman emperor seems to have passed, constructed a calendar of five hundred and fifty-eight men, representing all ages of nations, who, in the opinion of the maker of the calendar. had made the most substantial contributions to human progress. It was by cultivating reverence for great men and by frequently calling before the mind their exploits and virtues that he hoped to lead humanity out of its weaknesses and distresses into the strength and light of a wider day.

The custom of the old Roman to take down from its niche the waxen image of an eminent ancestor on the anniversary of his natal day sprang from an instinct deep and wholesome. All nations feel that they can-not wisely ignore the past. They cannot let go of the men who lifted the world to a higher level, simply because they are in their graves. They must hear their voice in the clamor and uproar of to-day. In these days, when physical science has cast the glamour of its achievements over the world of things, it is well to remember that great men are among the very chiefest of God's ways and works. He created Shakespeare and Newton and Julius Cæsar and Plato. them as well as the dry land.

He made them and his hands formed Life everywhere has a tendency to become monotonous and sordid. Anything worth doing is worth doing ter never undertaken. Especially is this advice applicable upon the farm, and their truth is being more thorough ly demonstrated every year. The man who exercises proper care in the management of his farm is the man who realizes the top prices for his farm products. When prices are off a bit, the indifferent farmer, the slip shod, go-as-you please fellow, is invariably the one who suffers most severely, and it is entirely due to his methods.

Right now is the time to begin farming right. Now is the time for burning your plant beds, and a hearty, thrifty plant is just as much a necessity to a good tobacco crop as good land upon which to grow it. Therefore, if you do not know how to properly prepare your bed, do not hesitate to ask good price on the market, and that it ounce, which is the prevailing price for good seed, it is cheaper and better in the long run than seed from an unknown crop or variety, which you have perchance had given to you. With the sowing of your plant bed your work has only just begun, and from now on you will be called upon to exercise, not only your muscles, but your brain, for brawn alone does not raise good crops. You will say, "well I have been raising tobacco all my life," suppose you have, have you been getting top price for your crop, if not, it is more than probable due to your lack of knowledge on the subject, and you can without lower ing your dignity in the least, well af-

Garrard county holds the record for raising the best tobacco in the greatest tobacco raising state in the Union, and those men who have helped to make that reputation will gladly impart what information is necessary to their less informed neighbor, so do not hesitate

We have the soil, we have the seed and we have the muscle, and all that is lacking to make every crop bring top prices is seasonable conditions and a proper knowledge of the best methods to pursue. Over the first named condition, we have no control, but the second we have, and we owe it not alone to ourselves, but to our county to make the soil produce the very best of which it is capable.

Good methods in corn raising are just as essential as in the raising of tobacco. Much land has already been To him it is only a cheap little bit of which will be held next week. The inbroken, and this soil will, as is usually the case under such conditions, be much county, and seed will be a little harder corn for seeding purposes.

This advice is not theoretical, it is practical, deduced from the experience of practical farmers, men who have made a lifetime study of farming, and who have proven by actual dollars and cents increase in the value of their crops, that to begrudge a dollar in the matter of procuring seed and stinting cultivation means a ten fold decrease in your profits during the year.

It is exceedingly doubtful if those members who put up such a howl about being reflected upon by Mr. Price's measure gained very much in the opinion of the people of the state by their wail of pretended unjust criticism. Prominent Young Men Ot Harrodsburg Have Automobile Accident Which Proves Fatal To One Of Them.

While returning from Lexington in an automobile last Sunday night, Lisle Edwards and Buford Terhune, prominent young men of Harrodsburg, met with an accident which resulted in Edwards' death and Terhune is in a serious condition. When a short distance out of Lexington the machine in some manner became unmanageable and Edwards who was driving exclaimed "I cannot turn the steering wheel" and almost simultaneously with his exclamation the car went over an embankment, turned bottom side up, pinioning both young men under it in the bed of a small creek. Here's Their Opportunity.

On Tuesday in the House of Representatives the bill to reduce the pay of the members of the Legislature from $10 to $5 per day was tabled by a vote of 61 to 16, which rings its death knell. As to the justice of this action, we do not pretend to say, but we do say that the sixteen members who voted against tabling the measure now have an excellent opportunity of immortalizing themselves in the eves of their constituency and the world at large. If they are of the one slightly used piano for opinion that the pay is in excess of the value of their services, do not need the sale at a bargain. money, or have conscientious scruples about accepting it, let them donate the amount in excess of the amount they would have fixed as their pay to the various charitable institutions of the state. This course would not only ease their canscience, but would prove of great benefit to the institutions who would profit by their generosity, who would arise and call them blessad, and would strew their graves with flowers when they have passed to their great

SILAGE FOR BEEF MEN.

Excellent For Fattening and For Feeding Stock Cattle.

For a period of four years tests have been carried on with steers at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture to determine the value of silage as a feed for the fattening steer when fed alone with a suitable grain ration or in connection with either good alfalfa or clover hay roughages fed with a grain ration. In every instance it was found that silage lowered the cost of grains when introduced into the ration, and when fed as the sole roughage valthough gains were not so large as when clover or alfalfa hay was added to the ration) the gains were made the most cheaply.

It is unwise for the farmer to feel that because silage is a good feed it can be made the sole feed for stock. says the Iowa Homestead. By nature it is high in water content, low in protein and high in carbohydrate materials. To be properly balanced the ration should contain some feeds that are low in water content and carbohy drate material and high in protein For fattening purposes a good day's ration for a 1,000 pound steer would consist of from fifteen to twenty pounds of silage, five or six pounds of alfalfa or clover hay, fifteen to eighteen pounds of broken ear corn and two or three pounds of cottonseed meal. Not only is silage useful to the beef man for fattening purposes, but it is useful for stocking cattle over the winter, and a farm test made upon a Wisconsin farm under the supervision of the College of Agriculture showed an average daily gain of over a pound per day, and the steers came out in the spring in good condition to go on grass. These steers were fed about twenty pounds of silage daily, together with what timothy they would consume. When stocking over young cattle on silage it would be preferred to have clover hay or alfalfa hay, as it is higher in protein than timothy hay.

THE HARD MILKING COW.

Make Sure of the Animal's Value Before She Is Sold.

At the recent meeting of the Oregon Dairymen's association one of the members related how in one instance the testing association had been of help to him, says the Kansas Farmer. In his herd was a short teated cow, to the milking of which the boys objected have done their duty when they have strenuously.

The cow was sold for $55 on the

At the recent international live stock show at Chicago considerable interest centered around the two day milking test of dairy bred Shorthorns. Two classes were arranged for cows in milk, one taking those three years old and over and the other those under three years. Five herds had entries in the first class and three in the sec-ond. The highest production record made was 104.9 pounds. The next highest record was 97.4 pounds. Some of the other very good show-ings were 86.8, 85.3, 82.7 and 83 pounds, all made by cows three years old or over. The best record in the heifer class was 60.2 rounds. in the heifer class was 60.3 pounds. The milking Shorthorn cow shown is Eastover Kirklevington, imported by J. J. THE BEGINNING OF GOOD BUTTER

More and more I am coming to think that the beginning of good butter lies in the care with which the milk is drawn and bow it is treated afterward in the pails, cans and other tin utensils, says E. L. Vincent in the American Cultivator.

It is not long ago that a neighbor told me that a farmer of our neighborhood after nfilking his cows took the mess to the can be was to send to the creamery and poured it right out without straining at all! I was greatly surprised that in our day and age of the world, with all our papers advocating cleanliness and with all the lecturers going up and down the land showing how important it is that we should be extremely careful how we handle milk if we are to have good butter, that any one should be so absolutely indifferent to the most common points of decency.

I know we cannot strain all impure matter out of milk. I know that at best the strainer is a crutch, but it does help, and no man who wishes to make good butter or to have the milk he sends away to others either to be used as whole milk or to be turned into butter at the creamery, clean, can af-

As a breed the Ayrshire cow is almost as large as the Holstein. smoother in contour and quite as strong and rugged as any breed of cattle. They are exceptionally good grazers and respond well to good care in cold climates. There is a smaller number of high record cows in the Ayrshire breed than in some other dairy breeds, but it is quite a noticeable fact that Ayrshire herds average high in production. This demonstrates great uniformity in the yielding powers as well as in color marking, individuality, size and breed type. Fresh Meat Circle. For several years we have maintain-

Usually eight men, heads of families, comprise the company, and one of the men is designated as butcher and paid $1 for each animal killed, and other members aid in turn. In killing a hog or a beef the careass is cut as equally as possible into eight parts. and each man takes his turn in the taking of different sections until at the end of the season each family has consumed a whole carcass, all used fresh. In butchering a hog the owner keeps the offal and renders the lard and on a beef does likewise and sells the hide. All differences in weight are settled at a fixed price per pound, and the plan seems to be very satisfactory.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

DISEASES OF HOGS.

Worms and Lack of Mineral Matter

Often Cause Serious Loss. Whenever and wherever hog cholera s prevailing all other epidemics to which swine are subject are apt to be classified as hog cholera. Here is an to-wit: incident that took place in Will county, Ill., which is a case in point. The same is related by the Farmer's Review as illustrating the value of a county adviser: One day a hurry up call was received from a farmer whose hogs were dying from supposed cholera. Of 300 head but fifty were left, and the external appearance of these did not indicate cholera. The adviser had a sick one killed and immediately made a postmortem examination. The vital organs were found to be in a healthy ondition, but the intestines were full of worms. Mr. Grannis advised a vermifuge for expelling the worms and the feeding of a mixture of limestone screenings, rock phosphate and wood ashes. This advice was followed, and no further loss of pigs followed. This advice is invaluable to the hog raiser. Worms and lack of mineral matter are Four students of Bethel College two great causes that contribute to a may come along, and if they die in any number it is called cholera.

WARDING OFF CHOLERA.

Prevention of Disease In the Hog Herd

Better Than Treatment. There is a farm in central Ohio which is noted for its fine hogs. There are always from 150 to 300 good porkers on it, says the Farm and Fireside. Cholera has raged all about it, but there has never been a case on the farm. It is a farm of over 1,000 acres.

One day a neighbor came wandering through the place. The owner halted would require his permanent residence owner. The neighbor grew huffy. "Well," said the owner, "you wouldn't come into my house if you had small-
